Overview

About Bryan

Bryan Basso is a patent litigator based in Fish & Richardson's Silicon Valley office. Mr. Basso represents both plaintiffs and defendants, ranging from startups to Fortune 100 companies, in complex patent litigation in U.S. district courts, before the U.S. International Trade Commission (ITC), and at the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office.

With a background in electrical engineering, Mr. Basso's practice encompasses a wide range of products and technology, including microprocessors, memory, optical communications, software, GPS navigation systems, semiconductor fabrication, networking, consumer products, sports equipment, graphics cards, satellite communications, and power supplies. In addition to his work before the ITC, Mr. Basso has experience in a variety of U.S. district courts, including in the Northern Districts of California, Illinois, and Ohio, the Eastern Districts of Texas and Michigan, the Western District of Texas, and the Districts of Delaware and Utah.

Mr. Basso's broad litigation experience includes all aspects of patent cases from pre-suit investigation to fact and expert discovery, claim construction, dispositive motion practice, trial, post-trial briefing, and appeal. Mr. Basso's experience also includes inter partes review proceedings on behalf of both patent owners and petitioners as well as assisting clients with design patent litigation and patent due diligence. Furthermore, Mr. Basso provides analysis and counseling to clients outside of litigation in connection with large-scale patent due diligence, patent risk analysis, and other forms of patent analysis to provide meaningful advice to support business decisions in licensing, monetization, and other business transactions.

Prior to joining Fish, Mr. Basso had previous technical experience with Novell as a software tester. During law school, Mr. Basso worked as a legal extern in Novell's legal department and served as an arbitrator at BYU's Center for Conflict Resolution.
