Overview

About Ethan

Ethan Rubin is a registered patent attorney who focuses his practice on patent, trade secret, and other intellectual property litigation. He has litigated in U.S. district courts, the U.S. International Trade Commission, and the Patent Trial and Appeal Board (PTAB). Ethan is experienced in all facets of intellectual property litigation, including fact and expert depositions, motion practice, claim construction, pre-trial preparation and post-grant review before the PTAB. Ethan is regularly called upon to draft and argue dispositive motions in U.S. district courts. His cases span a range of complex technologies, including computer networking and network security, digital image processing, data storage systems, and medical devices.

In his pro bono practice, Mr. Rubin represents clients in need of political asylum and immigration representation through the Kids In Need of Defense (KIND) organization and Political Asylum/Immigration Representation Project (PAIR).

During law school, Mr. Rubin worked at a corporation's intellectual property department in which he prepared and prosecuted patents relating to data storage systems. Mr. Rubin also worked as a student attorney, advocating for local pro bono clients on various housing and family law matters.
