Overview

John Adkisson is president and chief executive officer of Fish & Richardson and has served in that role since 2020. As president and CEO, John is responsible for the firm's overall strategic direction. He has a reputation for his in-the-trenches work ethic and his passion for promoting Fish's culture of innovation and teamwork to the firm's clients and potential clients. John's priorities include expanding the firm's global reach and maintaining and building on Fish's reputation as one of the world's premier intellectual property firms.

John has chaired the firm's Management Committee since 2020 and has been an elected member of the Management Committee since 2017. John also served as the managing group leader for the firm's 200-plus lawyer litigation group from 2017 to 2020.

In addition to serving as president and CEO of the firm, John has 20-plus years of experience as a patent infringement litigator. Over the past decade, John has focused on high-stakes pharmaceutical cases, including representing clients in Hatch-Waxman and the rapidly emerging field of biosimilar litigation. John has also acted as lead counsel in numerous post-grant proceedings before the Patent Trial and Appeal Board.

Some of John's high-profile cases include helping Repligen Corp. and Massachusetts Institute of Technology win a $65 million settlement from ImClone Systems. He was on the team that represented Coherus BioSciences Inc. and succeeded in getting three key patents covering AbbVie Inc.'s arthritis medication Humira® — the world's best-selling drug — invalidated by the PTAB in 2017.

As the managing group leader for the firm's litigation group, John played a pivotal role in investing in and shaping the firm's next generation of trial lawyers. He is a strong proponent of Fish's 1L Diversity Fellowship program, which awards scholarships and summer associate positions to diverse first-year law students.

John's contributions to the field of intellectual property law have been widely recognized. In 2020, Law360 featured John in his new role as CEO. In 2015, The National Law Journal profiled his long-standing successful work on behalf of 3M Co. He has also been named a Minnesota Super Lawyer since 2016 and has been included in Best Lawyers in America every year since 2015.

"John Adkisson is very, very good. He's unflappable in negotiations, he doesn't bang his shoe on a podium, he comes across well and he's persuasive to folks on the other side. He always takes a thoughtful approach, he's not emotional, and he'll say why if he disagrees." — Client testimonial, 2017 Chambers and Partners
